THEME

Life story work with children who are fostered or adopted is universally recognised as fundamental to helping them understand their history and form a positive sense of identity. This in turn can provide the protective factor of a coherent story as a foundation for better emotional health in adulthood. Despite its importance, in today's pressurised working environment it has become increasingly difficult to give this area of work the priority it deserves. This workshop will help busy practitioners think about what life story work means in their work setting and how best to go about it.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This workshop is suitable for social workers and social work assistants who have responsibility for undertaking life story work with fostered or adopted children.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

This AFA Scotland workshop will provide participants with an understanding of:

- What is involved in life story work;
- How to overcome some of the barriers to carrying it out;
- Who else can help with it – working out roles and responsibilities;
- Planning and preparation;
- Communicating with children about difficult events in their lives;
- Practical advice on compiling a life story book.
