THEME

The Children (Scotland) Bill 2020 and the Independent Care Review (ICR) highlight the duty of adults to make sure children's voices are heard within the looked after system. This means more than reporting their views; now we must support each child on a continuous basis to participate in, understand and contribute to every decision and plan being made about them.

This virtual session will look at:

- The recommendations of the ICR
- Research on communicating with children
- The legal requirements of professionals to seek, record and communicate the child's views to decision makers and in meetings, hearings, panels and at court
- Ensuring that the child is informed throughout the process and the methods used to evidence the child's continuous participation.
