Children who are in foster care, kinship care or are adopted have often experienced developmental trauma which can have a serious impact on their health and wellbeing. This can also bring challenges for those who care for them and can leave them feeling that “nothing works”. This workshop will consider the causes of developmental trauma and explore ways in which practitioners can support the recovery and resilience of those children and young people, either directly or through their carers.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

This workshop is aimed at children's social workers, family placement workers and managers.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Understand the causes of developmental trauma in children and young people and the impact of this on them.
- Consider how this can also affect those caring for them and how to support them.
- Explore ways in which practitioners can promote recovery and resilience directly and indirectly.
- Consider some tools and frameworks which can support this work.
